Refuse disposal would be less of a problem if the CCC made it possible for householders to dispose of their refuse in an easier way

e.g Some cities supply separate containers for the different classes of recyclable materials

I find it very frustrating to frequently find some items e.g plastic containers left behind by the collection service, they then end up in my garbage bag!

2 :Dog control laws do not seem to have any cause and effect relationship i.e The people who own dogs that cause problems seem to be able to ignore dog control laws while law abiding owners get punished why is that?

Also it would be easier for dog owners to remove dog droppings if there were more containers of plastic bags available in popular dog walking areas

Do you have any other comments or suggestions you want to make?

Rate increases are not as inevitable as the CCC seems to think

Last month the CECC ran a seminar demonstrating how many organisations around the world Hugely reduce the costs of services such as the CCC provide, by adopting Lean Thinking methodology. Why was there no one from the CCC at this seminar to learn how their costs could be hugely reduced without any loss of service?
